Clyde and Bruton should be in park, entrance needed for Haliburton...commission, chamber

Two briefs submitted to the provincial parks council reviewing the master plan for Algonquin Park have suggested that Burton and Clyde Townships remain as part of the park and also that an entrance to the park from the Haliburton Highlands is needed.

The briefs compiled by both the Haliburton County Economic Development Commission and the Haliburton Highlands Chamber of commerce were submitted to the Ministry of Natural Resources at the first five-year review of the master plan. The municipality of Dysart et al also submitted an objection to the removal of the townships from the park.

It has been suggested by the council that the townships of Bruton and Clyde be removed as they did not conform with other parts of the park as snowmobiling is allowed and other activities that are not carried on elsewhere in the park.

"The concept of removing the townships of Clyde and Bruton from Algonquin Park ... nothing can be gained and considerable financial loss can be experienced by our county if such a decision is made," the report by the commission reads.

Bruton and Clyde Townships form the elongated tip that extends south from the park into Haliburton County.

The commission went on to point out that if the townships were removed the property would probably revert to crown land and the municipality of Dysart et al would lose its grant in lieu of taxes that it now receives.

"Since two thirds of this grant goes directly to the grant goes directly to the County Board of education the entire county would be required to make up this lost revenue," the report states.

It was also suggested by the commission that if the townships are to be excluded from the park they should become patent land so that the land would be taxable.

The Chamber, and the commission, suggests that special status be given to the townships to allow special activities to be carried on there.

"A more logical solution to handling these townships that you refer to as 'anomalies' would be to provide them with special status...these townships, it would seem to us, offer the Ministry a tremendous opportunity to accommodate some of the special interest groups that rightfully are applying pressure for some use of the park.

The chamber suggests that snowmobilers, skiers, hunters, canoeists, fishermen, motor cyclists and lumber companies could be granted use of these townships.

The chamber also suggested that the park not be kept such a "secret" and that the province should promote it and the tourist operations in and around the park.

Another suggestion which the economic Development

Commission made was that there should be an entrance to the park from Haliburton. It was noted that the northern section of the county borders on the park.

It was requested that the Galipole Lakes area be considered as a road now exists in the area although it needs to be upgraded and extended to meet other roadways. According to the commission this access point could be administered by the Minden branch of the Ministry of Natural Resources.

Another point of access suggested was near Wolfe Lake as this would service the Dorset area.

In conclusion the commission said it would like to see more money allocated by the Ministry to forest and fish management in the park, "particularly in the neglected townships of Clyde and Bruton."

I'm awake

This little tot just couldn't go to sleep last Saturday morning at the second annual Haliburton ladies softball tournament. Eight teams from the surrounding communities including Coboconk, Little Britain and Paudash took part. Minden came close to winning the championship while Haliburton took the consolation trophy. For pictures and story please turn to page 10.

EDC examines options

The Haliburton County Economic Development Committee has entered a second stage in its investigation of future prospects for the area. The committee, meeting recently in Haliburton, has decided to form a number of sub-committees which will examine more closely the specific suggestions which have been made during the past months.

The smaller groups will be able to concentrate on individual problems and potentials of a particular industry. Specifically committees have been established to assess the feasibility of building a central evaporating plant for the maple syrup industry, the potential for mining in the area and the possibility of having a pulp mill in the county.

The members of the commission also discussed the establishment of a forestry management course at the Haliburton Highlands Secondary School, the loss of the CNR service to the county and what input, if any, the commission should make to the five year review of the Algonquin Park master plan.

Earlier this year the commission held a number of public meetings at which submissions were received from all sectors of the community.

Members of the commission will meet on a monthly basis to discuss the progress of the various sub-committees.

Scott pays tribute to the "Chief"

"John Diefenbaker was Canada's greatest statesman."

With those words, Victoria-Haliburton MP Bill Scott added his tribute to the many paid to the western Canadian politician and former Prime Minister who passed away early Thursday morning.

"I admired the man very much," Scott said. "He was a politician for the common man, a leader who never forgot his humble beginnings, a man who always had time for the little man."

The Haliburton MP noted that the respect felt for Diefenbaker on Parliament Hill was shared by politicians of all parties. "It wasn't just the Conservatives that looked up to the man or respected his years of experience. One could often find MPs of the other political parties in his office talking over a situation."

"Diefenbaker was a fair and able debater," Scott commented. "He would listen to your side of the argument and if he agreed, he'd join you.

If he disagreed, he would state his reasons for doing so. The debate may become heated but once it was over the man was as personable and as friendly as before."

Gentle rain?

It is hard to believe that something as innocuous, essential and inevitable as rainfall is destroying Haliburton lakes, but according to environmentalists and scientists, that is the case.

Rain. Common, ordinary, falling from the sky rain, is slowly killing the lakes of Haliburton as well as a large number of water bodies throughout the province. The culprit, of course, is not the rain itself, but rather chemicals contained in the raindrops. Each cloudburst, shower or drizzle brings with it a dose of acid that is souring the water of our lakes and rivers and irrevocably altering the environment.

The phenomenon is not new, however the disastrous impact acid rain is currently having, and is expected to produce in future, is just now coming to light. Not only are we barely starting to realize what a serious threat acidified precipitation poses, but scientists tell us the time left to correct the situation is rapidly dwindling.

This week The Times begins a three-part examination of acid rain and its consequences for Haliburton and all of Ontario. The series, with an explanation of what acidified precipitation is and where it comes from, begins on page five.

FROM THE CHAMBER

By Bob Stinson

Algonquin Park review
The Ontario Provincial Park's Council, a body set up by the government to monitor public opinion and make recommendations concerning the provincial parks, met last week in Huntsville to hear submissions. The Chamber and the County Economic Development Commission each presented briefs pointing out our concerns.

The Ministry of Natural Resources had suggested that possibly the townships of Clyde and Bruton be dropped from Algonquin Park and the main content of our presentations were in opposition to that concept. Among other considerations, the fact that a grant in lieu of taxes would be lost to Dysart et al was a major concern. Since two thirds of that grant is for education, and applies directly to that County School Board, it would have an impact on every tax payer in the County.

Since governments are being called on lately to make spending cuts, the practice of attempting to shift the expenses from one body to another is becoming common-place. Municipalities are at the end of the line on this trip, since they have nowhere else to pass it to. Governments must cut their spending — but the savings must be real — not just shifted to another level of government to deal with there.

Other briefs presented at Huntsville came from the Snowmobile Federation in favour of allowing some snowmobiling in the park, cottage lease holders in the park who are threatened with discontinuation of their leases, the canoe outfitters in the park who are faced with the same threat, and a local trapper who felt that hunting and trapping should be re-established in the park. He contended that there were now more healthy deer and fur bearing animals outside the park boundaries than within due to the artificial environment that has been maintained.

It was interesting to note that although this meeting was held in Huntsville there were no presentations made from anyone in that immediate area.

No phone at Caboose

Moving the Haliburton Caboose information centre to its new location adjacent to the Rail's End Gallery has certainly increased the activity at that centre, but it has also created some temporary problems. Since the initial move the centre has been awaiting re-connection of Hydro and now they have lost their phone. A dump truck with the box raised, cleaned out the lines on Friday, and with the repair crews on strike it is questionable when they may have much needed communication lines open.

Are you getting as fed up with strikes as we are? Should resort and motel owners have to lose business, and the travelling public be inconvenienced because Bell and their employees can't agree? In the meantime there are a lot of unemployed people that would love to have those jobs without the increases they are striking for. If there were only some way the public could strike against the unions to put them out of business or at least force them to take a responsible attitude.

A new newspaper

What another one! Not exactly. Hillen Enterprises over in Bancroft have just published their second edition of the "Centennial Revue" in conjunction with Bancroft's Centennial celebrations. The paper is produced only once a month and is distributed free at a number of stores in our Eastern Townships. We are pleased that our Chamber has been asked to contribute a column to their publication beginning with this issue. The paper concentrates on humour and local interest items as opposed to hard news stories.

We offer our best wishes to Bill Hillen in this new endeavour and thank him for including us in his plans.

Coming events

The Haliburton Kinsmen Club is holding a dance on Saturday, September 1st featuring "Kid Kelly" at the Dysart Community Centre. The Kinsmen will hold the draw for the "Monte Carlo" they have been selling tickets on throughout the summer. The dance admission is only $5.00 per couple payable at the door. A few tickets on the car are still available at Kennedy Surplus and Dawson's Insurance.

On August 28th the current display of the Best of Ontario Crafts moves out of the Rail's End Gallery to make room for a private collection of Eskimo Art on loan from Ray Goulet. It's only there until the 15th of September so don't miss it.

Winter events

We keep trying. Every time the Ministry of Industry and Tourism reminds us that it is time to let them know our events for the next season we appeal to you in this column for information. Each time we are overwhelmed with silence and must begin our detective work to find out what is being planned, and when.

PLEASE — we have until September 1st to advise the Ministry of our planned events for the months of December, January and February. Phone us at 286-1760, save us some time, and be assured that your event is listed in the Winter Book.

Late flash — tartan is here

Our new shipment of Haliburton Highlands Tartan just arrived from Scotland and is now available in wholesale lots of 10 yards or more, or retail in any quantity at $19.95 per yard. For more information call the Chamber office.

Sawfly damage can be costly if not controlled early

The redheaded pine sawfly, better known to Latin lovers as the Neodiprion lecontei, is on the move and according to an Ontario Ministry of Natural Resources spokesman, the insect can wipe out a plantation of red pines in short order.

The insect is one of the most voracious of the forest pests. Keith Oitment of the Minden District MNR office noted that the pine sawfly can eat all the foliage on a tree. The pine tree stripped of its needles soon dies as transpiration and other functions carried on by the needles is halted.

Most of the damage is done during July when the larvae of the insect eat away at previous year's growth. With minor infestation that can mean that some needles can be left on the tree and it will survive, although the growth rate will be greatly reduced. When there is a particularly heavy infestation, as now exists in a plantation just north of Minden, all pine foliage is eaten and the tree dies. The larvae can remain active until October.

Control of the infestations is best achieved when the first signs of the insects are noticed, according to the MNR official. The attack usually begins on the trees on the perimeter of the plantation and may take several years before serious damage can be inflicted on a large number of trees. The ministry official emphasizes however that the sooner a plantation owner recognizes the problem and takes remedial action, the sooner, and less expensive, the final solution will be.

"It can be very expensive if the plantation owner does not act when the sawflies are first noticed," Oitment said.

While initially younger trees fall prey to the insects mature trees are not immune. The insect feeds on Jack and Scotch pine as well as the Red Variety.

"If the larvae do not kill a tree, the action of the insect will result in poor diameter growth and the defoliated branches will probably die," Oitment commented.

The larvae grow to approximately 25 mm and are yellowish in colour with black spots. The insect winters in a cocoon in the litter.

Control of the larvae is best accomplished through the spraying of an insecticide, according to the ministry. The recommended spray is malathion, 50 per cent emulsified concentrate. As with any chemical spray, the ministry recommends the user follow the instructions supplied by the manufacturer

Scott notes however, that it was Diefenbaker's concern for the common man which made him a favourite with Canadians. "A constituent had been having some problems with federal agricultural inspectors," Scott recalls. "It had become a long drawn out dispute in which the people had asked for my assistance. When we were unable to get satisfaction locally, I invited the couple to Ottawa to meet with the deputy minister of agriculture."

"That meeting proved equally fruitless and as we emerged from the office, the constituent said he wanted to speak to Mr. Diefenbaker about the problem. I was somewhat hesitant to bother him, knowing how busy he was, but I agreed to call him on the phone. After a brief explanation he invited us over to his office."

"Mr. Diefenbaker listened to their problem and agreed with the stand taken by the couple. As we were leaving the office he advised me, "Bill, you line them up (referring to the various agricultural officials) and I'll skin them." The couple was later vindicated in their stand.

Scott recalls how visitors to the members dining room would insist on their hosts introducing them to Mr. Diefenbaker. "The former Prime Minister would always rise to greet the visitors. In the last few years, it of course became more difficult, but he always made a point of being on his feet when meeting visitors, including children. I think that is a good indication of the respect with which he held the people of this country."

Scott, who has worked closely with Mr. Diefenbaker over the years, said the former Prime Minister will be missed by those on Parliament Hill and Canadians from all provinces. "He had a great vision of Canada," Scott said. "He was a great 'people' person."

Blaze destroys Kashagawigamog cabin

Fire August 15 destroyed a cabin at Edgewater Beach resort on the south side of Kashagawigamog Lake. The blaze leveled the single storey frame structure causing an estimated $15,000 damage.

The cabin was rented at the time by an Etobicoke family of three. Mr. and Mrs. Don Brohm and son were not in the structure when the fire started. All of their belongings left in the cabin were lost in the blaze.

Fire officials believe the blaze started behind a box stove. The wood burning stove apparently overheated causing the joints to separate allowing the fire to escape.

Both Minden and Dysart fire brigades responded to the call for assistance.

Fire officials, right, examine a wood stove they believe caused the fire.

The Mountain Lake Property Owner's Association has taken its concern about acid rain right to the top.

The organization has fired off a series of letters to politicians, officials and company representatives on both sides of the Canada-United States border, requesting that urgent action be taken.

The letters, which were prompted by a resolution passed by the group at its recent annual meeting, was approved unanimously by the 50 owners attending. The association represents 89 property owners on the lake north of Minden.

The resolution acknowledges that acid rain is a serious threat to lakes in the Haliburton area and that primary sources of the pollutants are coal burning electrical generating stations in southern Ontario and the northern United States, as well as Inco in Sudbury.

The resolution read, "The Mountain Lake Property Owners' Association urges the Prime Minister of Canada, to take action with the Province of Ontario and the President and Congress of the United States to immediately initiate action to reduce the acid rain problem with the ultimate goal of elimination of acid rain pollution in the atmosphere of the Haliburton and Muskoka areas."

The resolution and letters expressing its concern were sent by the group to Prime Minister Joe Clark, United States President Jimmy Carter, Ontario Premier William Davis, John McCreedy chairman of the board of Inco Metals Limited, Victoria-Haliburton MP Bill Scott, Victoria-Haliburton MPP John Eakins, chairman of the International Joint Commission M. Cohen, and governors in the following states, Michigan, Ohio, Pennsylvania and New York.

The letter to the chairman of Inco said the association was urging all governments to come to grips with the pollution problem and requested the same effort from the company.

"Profits at the expense of desolating the environment are morally unconscionable. We ask Inco to be a good corporate citizen and install scrubbers to remove the sulphur emissions that are a major cause of acid rain. If your stockholders knew the complete benefits, we believe they would approve the expenditure."

And in the letter to Ontario Premier William Davis the head of the association's environment committee suggested that the Ontario government should lead the way in eliminating the sources of acid rain. "Success could not be expected in negotiations (between Canada and the United States to reduce sulphur emissions) unless Ontario has taken some positive action with Inco Metals and Ontario Hydro to eliminate air pollution."

The letters were sent August 8 and no replies have been received.

The last gift

If asked to rank the five senses in their order of importance, we feel the majority of people would rate the ability to see as the most valued.

Our eyes give us more information about the world around us than any other sense. Not only do they help us understand and interpret events that take place within the range of their ability, sight opens men's minds to us and reveals the wonders of distant places through the written word and the images on our television screens.

Yet, in our day-to-day routine, how many consider just how important sight is or how lost we would be without it. Like all gifts that are priceless, the ability to see receives little thought until it is lost.

There are many individuals in the world who have never seen a baby's smile or enjoyed the majesty of a sunset. For them the world can only be imagined through less than complete verbal descriptions that offer only a vague understanding of the many things that must be seen to be appreciated. As well, there are those who have experienced sight and, through disease or accident, lost the ability. The loss they endure is exceptionally cruel.

Fortunately there is hope for these people. Modern medical science has developed methods of transplanting portions of an eye from a deceased person to a blind individual to give him sight. Imagine the emotional impact and joy that must fill the recipient as the bandages are removed from his face and the first rays of light penetrate the eyes and register as images in the brain.

The program to give sight to the blind was given a boost in Haliburton recently when the district Lions Club purchased two containers which will be used to transport the donated eyes from here to Toronto, where the operations take place. The containers form a vital link in the chain between donor and recipient. Without careful, controlled handling the delicate eye tissues deteriorate rapidly.

The Lions Club is to be congratulated for its efforts.

However, no matter how important the containers are, they are useless if people do not pledge their eyes. Arrangements to donate one's eyes following death must be made in advance. Instructions left with relatives or contained in wills may arrive too late.

Anyone in the Haliburton area who would like to donate their eyes to the eyebank, is urged to fill out the form on the reverse side of their driver's license or obtain a donor card at the two county hospitals, two senior citizens homes, from a CNIB representative or a Lions Club member.

The recipients are waiting, the containers are available, now, more than anytime in the past, your pledge can mean something.

It may well be the last gift you ever give, and we know, for the recipient, it will be the most important ever received.

A chorus of Brown-eyed Susans in the season's grand finale.

Where is Hal?

Dear editor:

The well has not run dry. I have temporarily left the county and am exploring one of the more exotic and primitive regions of the world. If I am not ravaged by the wild beasts or eaten alive by the natives, I shall return in two weeks. See you then.

REPORT FROM PARLIAMENT

by William C. Scott, M.P.

The Right Honourable John George Diefenbaker died at his Ottawa home on Thursday morning, August 16. The Chief was eighty-three, just 34 days away from his 84th birthday on September 18. The apparent cause of death was a massive heart attack, which occurred at about 6:30 a.m. Mr. Diefenbaker, always an early riser, had been up since 5:30 and was working in his study for about an hour when death occurred. His body was discovered by a friend who was staying with him, and his housekeeper.

Mr. Diefenbaker was the oldest parliamentarian in Canada, having been continuously a Member of Parliament since his election in 1940, he had run unsuccessfully twice before, in the general elections of 1925 and 1926, before finally being elected in the general election of March 26, 1940.

He had been re-elected in every subsequent election since then, most recently of course on May 22 of this year, which was the 13th consecutive general election that he had successfully contested.

The high point of Mr. Diefenbaker's parliamentary and public career came in 1956, when he was chosen national leader of the Progressive Conservative party of Canada, and a year later, in June of 1957, led the party to victory in the general election of that year and became the first Progressive Conservative prime minister that the country had had since 1935. Mr. Diefenbaker had also run unsuccessfully for the leadership twice before being chosen in 1956, but in 1957, his losing days seemed to be behind him. The following spring, in March, 1958, he called a general election and appealed to the people for a strong mandate. The results of that election made history. John Diefenbaker and the Progressive Conservative party were returned by an overwhelming 208 out of 265 House of Commons seats. No prime minister in Canadian history had before, or has since, won such a majority.

Throughout his long public career, first as a criminal lawyer in Saskatchewan and then as a parliamentarian, Mr. Diefenbaker was most noted for his concern for the ordinary, common man. This was best exemplified in what I consider to be his greatest parliamentary achievement, the Canadian Bill of Rights of 1960. This still remains the only time in the constitutional history of Canada that the fundamental rights and freedoms of the individual have ever been codified in Canadian statutes.

The Bill of Rights was what John Diefenbaker really believed in his heart and what he practiced throughout his entire life. When the Bill of Rights declares that the human rights of all Canadians are the right of the individual to life, liberty, security of the person and enjoyment of property and the right not to be deprived of them except by the due process of law, and that the individual has the right to equality and protection before the law, it is John Diefenbaker talking about something he really believed in and practiced all his life. When the Bill of Rights states that the fundamental freedoms of all Canadians are freedom of religion, freedom of speech, freedom of assembly and association, and freedom of the press, it is John Diefenbaker talking about those great freedoms that he fought all his life to defend and preserve.

The Chief was without a doubt truly one of the great Canadians of our history. He dominated the political life of the nation for almost four decades. A social progressive as prime minister, he was responsible for many of the reforms and improvements which we now take for granted. Under his administration came such things as ARDA and the rehabilitation of Canadian agriculture, the Northern Vision and a re-orientation of Canadians' thinking about the importance of the North, the development of the modern infrastructure of Canada (the roads, dams, harbours, bridges, airports), the Winter Works projects, the Trans-Canada Highway, and in the economic field, the first practical application of Keynesian economics in the management of the nation's finances.

Above all, John George Diefenbaker was first, last and foremost a Canadian. Born in Neustadt, Ontario, of German and Scottish parents, he always proudly referred to himself as just a "Canadian" and stoutly maintained that that was all that was required; Canadians didn't have to call themselves French-Canadians, German-Canadians, Irish-Canadians, Italian-Canadians, Polish-Canadians, etc. One Canada, one nation of one people, all Canadians, was his lifelong credo. John Diefenbaker is probably the only person who was principally responsible for making the "hyphenated-Canadian" concept, as he always derisively called it, obsolete in Canada.

John George Diefenbaker, 1895-1979. Parliamentarian, statesman, humanitarian, champion of justice, defender of the common man, historian, author, orator, traveller, a genuine, sincere, proud, loyal, great Canadian. We will never see his like again.

Acid rain: Long range pollution threatens area lakes

"In Ontario, 140 lakes, mostly in the Sudbury region, have been acidified. Ministry of Environment scientists estimate that a further 48,500 will not be able to tolerate, for any extended period of time, continuing acid input."

That quotation, taken from the June 1979 interim report of the Ontario Legislature's standing resources development committee, is a succinct summary of the serious dilemma now facing this province. Haliburton lakes are included in those threatened by the acidified precipitation. The implications for the future development of this area are extremely serious.

The report goes on to say, "At current rates of acid deposition, all these lakes could be dead, (no longer able to support a fishery), within the next 20 years."

While most scientists working in the field have been aware of the phenomenon of acidified precipitation, (most reports refer to the problem as "acid rain"...other precipitation forms, including snow, can be acidified as well), particularly in the Sudbury area and Scandinavia, it was believed that these were localized problems. In particular the increased acidity in precipitation in the Sudbury region was blamed on Sudbury basin ore smelters.

Outside of these areas there was little concern about acid rain. Consequently, there was little research being undertaken and the extent of the problem was not realized. It is only in the past few years that acid rain has become a major concern of scientists in other regions of Ontario and North America.

The problem comes to light

Several years ago Ministry of Environment officials, in conjunction with a number of other Ontario ministries, began a study of several lakes in the Haliburton-Muskoka area. The purpose of the Lakeshore Capacity Study, which was being carried out over a five year period, was to determine the ability of lakes in this area to cope with increased settlement along the shoreline. Specifically, the ministries were interested in determining the environmental damages that occur when cottage development takes place and the impact of increased recreational activity.

The study hoped to establish a formula which planners could use to determine the carrying capacity of any one lake.

During the course of the investigation, the scientists discovered that the acidity of the lakes they were examining was exceptionally high. Acid level testing had not been carried out in the past on most lakes and therefore the scientists did not have base figures with which to compare their findings. However, it was obvious to those taking part in the lakeshore study, that the lakes in the area had high pH (acid) readings.

One lake in northern Haliburton did have some historical data on pH levels. The readings were first taken in 1967. When a second test was completed in 1977, the lake in question was found to have lost 80 to 90 per cent of its ability to neutralize the acid coming into it. This offered dramatic proof that a major shift in the ecology of the lake had taken place in the intervening ten years.

Since there was no industrial source in the immediate area to which the increased acidity could be attributed, and no natural source which could be identified, the scientists surmised that the acid must be reaching the lakes through rainfall.

Understanding pH

The acidity of a solution is measured on a scale from one to 14. A reading of seven indicates a neutral state while readings less than seven indicate greater acidity or pH. The scale used to measure pH is an inverse log scale which means that for every unit change, the acidity increases ten-fold. For example, a pH reading of 4 is ten times more acidic than a reading of 5.

Precipitation normally is slightly acidic and has a reading of 5.6. This acidity results from natural processes which take place in the atmosphere. Fish, plants and animals have adapted to this acid level.

In recent years, rainfall in Haliburton has been found to have a pH of between 3.95 and 4.38. These readings are obviously much higher than "normal" rainfall. One rainfall in the area registered a pH level of 2.97, almost 400 times more acidic than normal rainfall.

Not a new problem

Scientists in Ontario have been aware of acidified rainfall and its effects on the environment for quite some time. Studies have been carried out in the Sudbury region where emissions of sulphur dioxide and nitrogen oxide from ore smelters had been blamed for the disappearance of fish from a large number of lakes and for the damage to plant life.

While there are other companies in the region, the operation of the International Nickel Company of Canada (INCO) and emission from its 1250 foot high so-called superstack, was pointed to as the most prolific contributor of sulphur and nitrogen to the atmosphere. In fact, INCO is the greatest single source of these pollutants in North America, pouring 36 tons of sulphur per day into the air.

However, further studies have shown that acidification found in rainfall in southern Ontario could not be blamed entirely on the Sudbury emissions. Investigation of weather patterns showed that the industrialized areas of the eastern United States and southern Ontario were the main sources of these damaging chemicals.

A seven month labour dispute at INCO helped to confirm these findings. During that period, when the smelters were not in operation, no appreciable difference in rainfall acid levels was noted. Some observers dispute this contention, but whether the INCO smelter is adding to southern Ontario acid rain or not, emissions from the superstack must indeed be adding to an acidified precipitation problem somewhere.

(A study by Ministry of Environment officials has shown that less than 20 per cent of the acidified precipitation occurring over Haliburton can be attributed to sources north and northwest of here.)

Gulf of Mexico

Weather patterns indicate that precipitation in Ontario generally originates in the warm moist air over the Gulf of Mexico. As the moisture-laden clouds are swept north by the prevailing winds, they pass over the most heavily industrialized regions of North America. In addition to the industrial sources of sulphur and nitrogen oxides, there are close to 300 coal fire electrical generating stations along the path of the weather pattern.

All fossil fuels, including coal, oil in its various refined forms and natural gas, contain sulphur. This chemical is removed from most natural gas before being used. Coal and oil can vary in the amount of sulphur they contain, but in all cases burning these fuels releases these chemicals into the atmosphere.

Southern Ontario industry and electrical generation, of course, adds its share to the clouds as they move north.

Part of the problem associated with the addition of these pollutants to the air is the long distance over which they can travel. The range is extended because a chemical process must take place before the precipitation becomes acidified. The sulphur and nitrogen oxides combine with the moisture and oxygen in the air to form an acid. This process takes place at a relatively slow oxidation rate, 0.4 to 12 per cent per hour.

This means the acidification of the precipitation takes place long after the weather pattern has passed the source point. Therefore an area contributing to the acidification of passing weather systems is not affected by its own contribution to the problem. As a matter of fact, scientists have ascertained that sulphur and nitrogen additions to the atmosphere can travel up to 1500 kilometres before falling back to earth.

Parts of Ontario

The acidified precipitation which is created over the United States falls on all parts of Ontario, but only certain areas are affected by its impact, (see map). Most of southern Ontario and the eastern portion of the province and several areas to the north escape the consequences. These areas of the province benefit from a high concentration of limestone in the bedrock. Limestone buffers the acid rain, neutralizing its harmful qualities. The depth of soil in southern Ontario also acts as a buffering agent.

In Haliburton, and throughout the Canadian Shield, the rock structure is much different. The rock of the Shield contains little easily soluble limestone, so the area has an extremely limited buffering capacity.

Soil depth on the shield is also thinner, which means that rain falling on the land reaches streams or lakes faster, thus giving less time for any buffering capacity contained in the soil to act. In fact, studies have shown that what little buffering capacity the Shield soils did have has now been depleted.

The increased acidity in the water bodies of the Haliburton area has resulted in a serious change in the ecology. Fish are most susceptible, particularly game fish like walleye, bass and trout. These species are least able to tolerate a change in the acid levels of their environment and therefore they are the first to be eliminated by the higher acidity. Lower order aquatic life, micro-organisms, crustaceans and plants, found farther down the food chain, are also affected.

According to a February 1979 Ministry of Environment publication, "...irreversible changes occur... requiring ten years to manifest themselves, including changes to the physical and chemical characteristics of waterways, plankton populations, composition shifts or the elimination and the eventual... fisheries."

Heavy metals

In addition to the direct impact of the increased acidity on the aquatic life, the rainfall is believed to have other detrimental effects on the environment. Scientists studying the question have noted that those lakes with increased acidity are also those lakes in which the heavy metal (mercury, aluminum, lead, etc.) concentration in fish is proportionately higher. It is suspected that the acid rain in some way frees or speeds the movement of these heavy metal particles in the soils, washing them into lakes and making them more readily available to fish and plants.

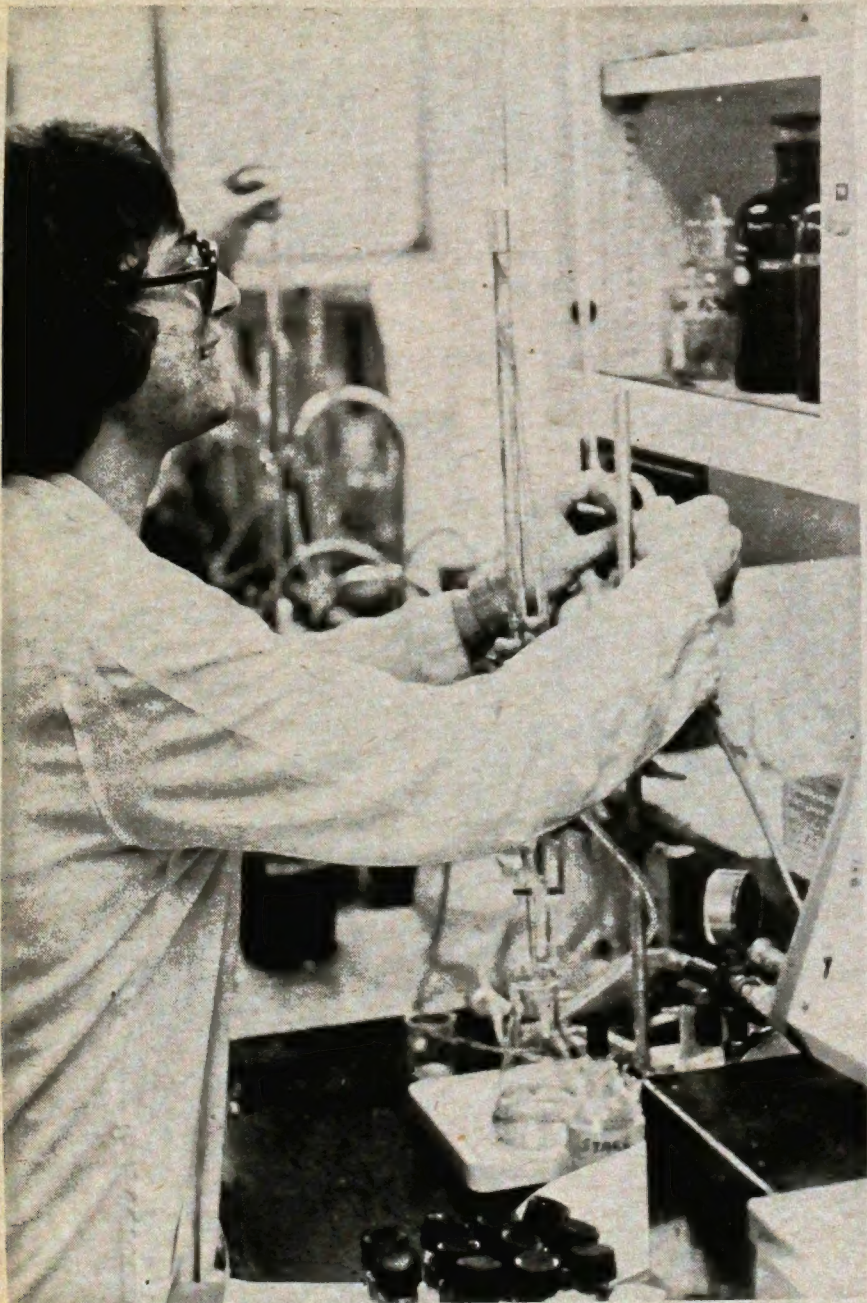

Increased concentrations of heavy metals in fish can be toxic or result in the fish being unsuitable for human consumption.

While scientists have drawn tentative conclusions between acid levels in lakes and increases in heavy metal intake by fish, the contribution of acid rain to this process is not yet fully understood.

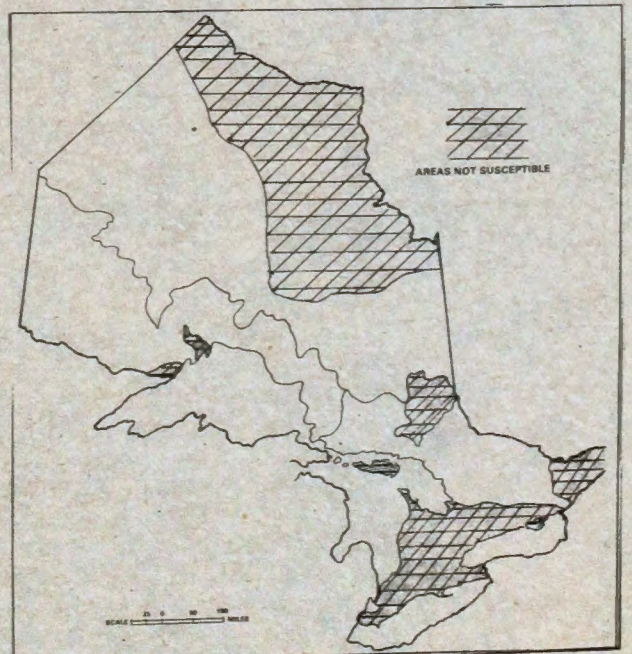

What scientists do know however, is that precipitation with an elevated acidic content is falling on almost all regions of Ontario and that lakes on the Canadian Shield, which includes Haliburton, are being seriously threatened. The widespread extent of this threat is just starting to come to light.

Scientists estimate at best the lakes in the area have only two decades left before they become lifeless. The question now is whether there is time left to change that prognosis.

Next week: A closer examination of the problems created by acidified precipitation.

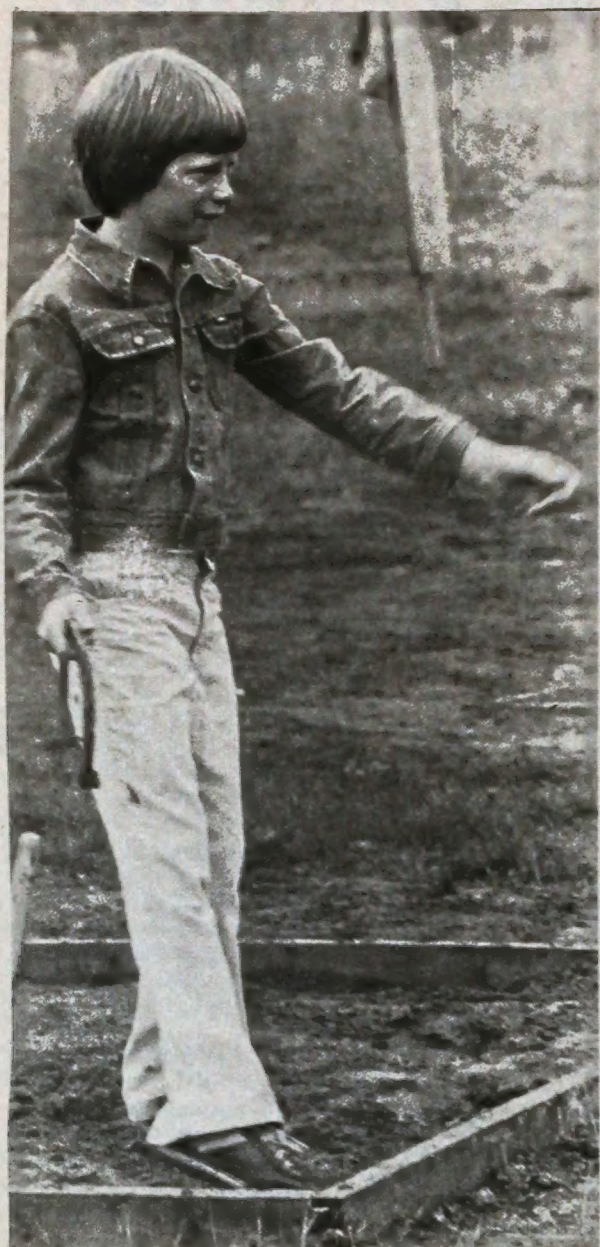

Samples of water from test lakes in Haliburton County are tested for acidity at the Ministry of Environment laboratory near Dorset. The group of 15 were first brought to the area to study the impact of other pollutants on area lakes. The main thrust of their efforts has now been directed toward acid rain.

The shaded areas indicate regions in Ontario which, because the limestone content in the bedrock, or the distance from industrial sources, are not susceptible to the effects of acidified precipitation.

Stanhope festival brings back spirit

Concentration

John Ballantyne, of Carnarvon, took his time and concentrated on his horseshoe pitching style at the pits early last Saturday afternoon.

The first annual Stanhope Festival of Fun went on with the usual invigorating spirit of the township residents although the weather was poor and rain drizzled down intermittently throughout the day.

During the morning the horseshoe pitching started and by noon time all the tossing pits were full and spectators were enjoying the event.

Even though the newly constructed tennis courts were dotted with small puddles, a large number of tennis enthusiasts came out to get a few pointers from a tennis pro who was available during the afternoon.

Drawing the biggest crowd of the day was the dog show. As time for the event approached short, large, small, long-eared and spotted dogs seemed to be coming from every direction.

David Burden snapped up the best of the breeds award, best working dog and dog with the longest nose, with his canine friend.

Owners of the prize-winning dogs were as follows: best dressed dog: Karen Minaker; largest dog: Tracy Mills; smallest dog: Nancy Minaker; dog with the shortest hair: Craig Smith; dog with the longest ears: Peter Deller; dog with the shortest legs: Joyce Gray; dog with the most spots: Craig Smith; best sporting dog: Craig Smith; best hound: Greg Howe; best non-sporting dog: Lee McKinley; best toy dog: Nancy Minaker; most obedient dog: David Teahen.

Reeve Jim Harrison and former reeve Sinc Nesbitt recite the names of the men who made the building possible.

Proud winner

Mary Hartin, of Kinmount, was one of the first spectators at the Kinmount Horticultural society flower show to tally up her points.

Full bloom

The many flowers on display at the show last Thursday were beautiful although some competitors blamed poor weather for holding back some particular blooms.

21 men join Stanhope brigade

Stanhope Township now has 21 volunteer firemen along with the newly appointed fire chief and deputy chief providing full fire protection to the residents.

At a public meeting Thursday night 21 men applied to join the recently reorganized fire crew. All applicants were accepted by township officials.

Last week the township council appointed George Wilson as fire chief and former fire department member Harold Barjarow as his deputy.

Mr. Wilson has extensive experience as a firefighter in the Pickering area.

Ten men of the new department have firefighting experience while eight were previously members of the Stanhope fire department.

According to Gerald Bain, township clerk, the Ontario fire marshal's office will be conducting a 40-hour training course to help the department get back on its feet.

Mary Hartin takes honors

Mary Hartin has done it again.

In fact this is the fifth time she has been named top winner at the Kinmount Horticultural Society's flower show. The show, held Thursday afternoon and evening at the Kinmount arena, seemed to be a success although some competitors said the poor summer weather had held back some of their flowers that normally would have been in full bloom for the show.

Even Mrs. Hartin, who entered 67 classes, said she would have had more flowers if the weather hadn't been so poor.

"I love the competition," she said, adding that she often helps other gardeners with their flowers in hopes of encouraging others to compete in the show.

"I just started my granddaughter this year. She's only five and she won two prizes," Mrs. Hartin said with a big smile.

Mrs. Hartin and her husband share a one-acre garden with two other families and as she says, they just love it.

To come up with first place, Mrs. Hartin won 33 firsts, 16 seconds, five thirds and one fourth place ribbon. These awards gave her a total of 327 points - not as well as she fared last year, but then she had entered 79 arrangements in that competition.

Her closest competitor, her daughter-in-law Penny Hartin, received a total point count of 141. Penny placed first seven times, second 14 times, third seven times and fourth once.

In third place, Guy Scott of Kinmount took eight firsts, seven seconds, eight thirds and one fourth.

Over 20 competitors took prizes for their entries.

Also, on Monday, Clarence and Ruth Tink, of Hampton (near Bowmanville), judged many gardens in the Kinmount area.

First prize winner was David McNamara, an 81-year-old resident, second went to Jane Rolfe and winning third prize was Mary Hartin.

The next large flower show will be held at the Kinmount Fair on Labor Day weekend.

Rescue bus for entire county says spokesman

Jerry Wood, assistant supervisor of the ambulance services in Haliburton Village has taken exception to a number of comments made by Anson, Hindon and Minden Reeve Sinclair Nesbitt at the August 8 meeting of the township council.

"I don't know where the reeve got his information," Wood stated this week reacting to a report in the August 15 edition of The Times.

"The bus may be located in Haliburton and under the control of the ambulance service operating out of this community," Wood commented, "but it is here to serve the entire county." He said the bus, known as the Spirit of Hope, is available for any emergency and that the vehicle will respond to calls outside of the county if necessary.

Wood said the bus was located in Haliburton because it was a central point in the county. He said the vehicle is registered in the name of the municipality of Dysart et al simply because some name has to appear on the registration forms.

The spokesman also said that the reeve's contention that the bus be operated by the Haliburton County Ambulance Service was also an incorrect statement. "There is no such organization," he pointed out. "There is an ambulance service located in Minden and one in Haliburton. The two are separate although they do share a central dispatching centre and co-ordinate their response to calls."

The report in last week's edition of The Times indicated that the council had been approached for a donation to help equip the bus. The mention of financial and monetary needs for the bus was contained in an article in a publication entitled Code 4. The article had been brought to the council's attention resulting in the comments on the request for assistance.

Wood said that no member of the staff had approached the council or any other group seeking a donation for the bus. He said that some groups and municipal bodies have made donations for the equipping of the rescue unit, but that no formal request has ever been made.

The vehicle was donated to the Haliburton Amulance Service by Travelway Bus Lines. A number of members of the ambulance crew have spent their spare time transforming the bus into a rescue vehicle that could be pressed into service in the event of an accident involving a large number of individuals.

Commenting on the statement that the bus failed to start on a number of occasions, Wood discounted the contention altogether.

"No one on the staff here can recall an occasion when the bus hasn't started," he said. "It is kept in a heated garage and receives regular maintenance checks. It is started three times a week as a test," he added.

The spokesman described the comments of the reeve as unfortunate. He said, "several members of the ambulance brigade have worked long, hard hours to transform the bus into a rescue vehicle. We are proud of our efforts and the service we can provide to the county and beyond."

Point of view

The provincial government has proposed a number of changes in the legislation concerning trespass. The changes would free land owners of certain liabilities if they allow their property to be used by others, and place a greater onus on the individual who contravenes trespass regulations.

Ron Reid, staff environmentalist with the Federation of Ontario Naturalists, offers the following Point of View on the proposed legislation.

Trespass is a thorny issue.

For some rural landowners, unauthorized trespass, with associated problems of littering, gates left open, damage to livestock, and loss of privacy has been a recurring headache. For others, who want to share at least part of their land with the responsible public, fear of liability for injuries has been a real handicap.

In 1977, the Ontario Trails Council added its voice to the many groups seeking changes in Ontario's legislation dealing with trespass and landowner liability.

public use of private land is such a sensitive subject. New proposals, however, contained in a white paper released by Attorney General Roy McMurtry, have been well worth the wait. To encourage landowners to open their lands for recreational use, the proposals would place liability for all risks with the entrant, unless the owner could be proven to have acted to deliberately create dangers or with reckless disregard.

Landowners will benefit greatly in other ways as well. Orchards and cultivated fields will be automatically closed to trespass without the need to post signs. Trespassers can be convicted either for entry without permission or for refusing to leave when asked, making enforcement easier. Maximum fines will be raised from $100 to $1000, and convicted trespassers can be ordered to pay the costs of prosecution. As well, the courts will be able to order compensation for damage to property or crops.

This new system will also permit a landowner more flexibility in controlling the use of his land. A proposed code of colour markings and signs will allow owners to designate that only certain activities are permitted (such as cross-country skiing) or that some specific activities are prohibited (for example trail bikes).

While the government clearly would like to encourage rural landowners to allow recreational uses, they have recognized that this cannot come about unless landowners have the tools to control abuses. McMurtry's proposals go a long way towards providing those tools, and they deserve our support.

Two hurt in collision

A two vehicle accident Saturday evening sent two people to hospital. The vehicles collided on Highway 35 south of Minden near the Lutterworth municipal offices.

A car driven by Burt Oostra of Hamilton was travelling north when it was in collision with a pick-up truck driven by Gwen Hewitt, Lutterworth Township. The Hewitt vehicle, which was southbound was in the process of turning into a private driveway on the south side of the highway.

Gwen Hewitt and a passenger in the Oostra vehicle, Joan Gage of Grimsby, were taken to Minden Red Cross Hospital for treatment. Two young children in the Oostra car were not seriously hurt.

The impact of the collision swung the Oostra vehicle around and sent the Hewitt vehicle into the ditch, coming to rest on its side.

Police say both vehicles were destroyed by the impact.

The mishap was investigated by Constable Gary Chapman.

$1000 damage

An accident August 11 resulted in close to $1000 damage when two vehicles collided in Haliburton. A car driven by Vern McPhail, 20, of Haliburton was northbound on Highway 519 when a second car, driven by James Bell, 18, of Agincourt entered the intersection at Park Street colliding with the McPhail vehicle. The accident happened shortly after 1 p.m.

The Bell car sustained $700 damage while the damage to the McPhail car was estimated at $300.

The mishap was investigated by Constable Popp.

A car driven by Michael Ellet, 20, of Orillia sustained $800 damage when it was in collision with a vehicle driven by Thomas Archer, 76, of R.R. 2 Minden. The mishap occured August 15 on the by-pass.

According to police the Archer vehicle entered the southbound passing lane from a private driveway and when it attempted to move into the driving lane, the two vehicles collided.

Damage to the Archer car was $1000.

Constable Wood investigated the accident.

Two injured

A driver of a car was seriously injured and his passenger sustained minor injuries when the vehicle in which they were riding left the Bark Lake Road and struck a rock cut.

Eric Wilson, 23, of Toronto was rushed to Haliburton Hospital following the mishap, August 17, suffering from major injuries. His condition is listed as satisfactory. A passenger in the 1978 van, 24 year old James Poe, also of Toronto, sustained minor injuries.

Police say the driver lost control of the vehicle on a curve and it left the road. Damage was estimated at $2,500.

Constable Popp investigated the accident.

Loses control

In another single car accident, a vehicle driven by a Hamilton man sustained $2000 damage after striking a rock cut.

John Johnston, 51, was attempting to pass another vehicle on Highway 35, north of Miners Bay, when he lost control of his car. The accident, which was investigated by Constable Jarvis, took place August 18.

Roll-over

$1000 damage resulted when a car driven by 17 year old Robert H. Newnam of Scarborough left the road and rolled over. The mishap took place August 18 on Highway 121.

Police report the man was westbound when the car entered the south ditch and rolled over.

Leaves road

A car driven by Gordon Hillman, 49, of Sarnia sustained $1000 damage when it left Little Kennis Lake Road and rolled over. The accident occurred August 18.

Constable Jarvis investigated.

Three injured

A driver and two passengers sustained minor injuries when the car in which they were riding left the road and struck a tree. The vehicle was westbound on the Barry

Line August 19 when it struck the tree on the south side of the road.

The driver of the car was Richard Collins, 19, of R.R. 1 Haliburton. Passengers in the vehicle were Kim Barry, 16, the owner of the car, of R.R. 1 Haliburton and Nathan Hie, also 16, of Haliburton Village.

The mishap was investigated by Constable Popp.

Minor injuries

A Waterloo man was treated at Minden Hospital for minor injuries following a single car accident August 19. Jeffrey J. Scully, 25, of Waterloo was the driver of a car which left the South Lake road and struck some rocks in the ditch. Damage to the 1979 vehicle was estimated at $6300.

Provincial Constable Dunham investigated the accident.

The Minden detachment of the Ontario Provincial Police investigated 14 motor vehicle accidents during the past week. As well the officers responded to 124 general occurrences.

SENIOR LEAGUE

by Linda English

We began another week of fun at Hyland Crest with Fun & Fitness. Monday morning the champion in the dart game was Mrs. Deumo, with an excellent score of 280.

At lunch time, Mr. Ship celebrated his birthday. We presented him with a nicely decorated cake and sang "Happy Birthday to Frank".

Later on in the afternoon, the ladies went downstairs to the craft room to work on their many bazaar items. Tea and goodies were served and everyone enjoyed an afternoon of being useful. At this point I'd like to mention that our Craft display, which we entered in the Haliburton County Fair, took first prize. We at Hyland Crest are certainly pleased, and getting a red ribbon and prize money certainly makes our efforts worthwhile.

Tuesday morning at 10 a.m. several residents went to the Chapel to worship with Rev. Denny of the Haliburton Anglican Church. Mr. Ray Jenkins played the organ while we sang our praises.

After lunch we went to the auditorium to watch the movies. "The Land of Promise" was all about the South African Republic. This vast republic is five times the size of Britain and is one of the richest countries in the world. It is very rich in minerals, and produces more gold, diamond and asbestos than any other country.

It was a very enjoyable afternoon on Thursday when we welcomed the ladies of Hall's Lake for the afternoon Tea Party. They served a delicious variety of tea breads and cookies. Mrs. Lil Rawlins was with the group and everyone was very pleased to have her entertain during and after the party. We would like to thank the Hall's Lake ladies for making the tea party a most happy event.

Friday, we began with our fun and fitness in the morning.

Later in the afternoon we welcomed two very special guests for sing song. Lenore Rose and Jean Goff sang and played the piano while everyone sang along. These ladies are very talented and we ended another week with an enjoyable Friday afternoon.

STANHOPE NOTES

by A. F. Stevenson

Stanhope Township's re-organized fire department really got moving at the meeting on Thursday August 16.

Following the remarks of Mr. Norman Vine of the Fire Marshall's office and the showing of a very informative film, applications were received from a total of twenty-one prospective members including one lady who, Mr. Vine was quick to point out, was one of a growing number who were taking part in the fire fighting duties.

We understand that four other applications are going to be submitted, thus it would appear that the department will be restored to its former strength.

And since all will be receiving the course laid down by the Fire Marshall's office, the township appears to be assured of another dependable fire fighting force. With a nucleus of trained men from the fire fighters who returned to meet the recent emergency, plus the new interested recruits, it looks as if things are again very promising for the township so far as fire protection is concerned.

Most property owners should be happy about this since it affects their pocket books. The presence of an active fire brigade will mean reduced fire premiums.

Festival of Fun

The Stanhope Festival of Fun day was a success in spite of the inclement weather. Some improvisation was needed because of the weather, but the public accepted the situation very generously and the various activities were well supported.

Mr. Charles Fader was the guest of honour at the official opening and this very congenial centenarian together with Miss Brenda Couch, Area Co-ordinator for Wintario, cut the ceremonial ribbon to declare the Stanhope Community Centre open.

The rainy conditions forced the opening ceremonies to be moved into the community hall. This made it possible for the guests from Extensicare and from Hyland Crest to enjoy the proceedings without being exposed to the elements.

Reeve Jim Harrison welcomed all to the opening of the community centre and, in his address, pointed out the fact that the final result was due to the efforts of community minded citizens.

Miss Brenda Couch, in her remarks as Wintario Co-ordinator for this area, referred to the satisfactory relations existing between Stanhope Township and Wintario as a result of the manner in which the township administration conducts its business with Wintario.

Reeve Harrison thanked all who had contributed so much in time, labour and material, as well as financial support, then went on to state that community spirit was not dead in Stanhope. He expressed the thought that, without pettiness, but with mature consideration and determination, the effort would still go on to make Stanhope Township a pleasant place to live and to visit.

The efforts of many people went into planning the Festival Day, and the hard working chairperson Ella Gillies deserves credit for her leadership. But so many people did so much it would be difficult to begin giving credit to everyone.

The excellent efforts of the library committee was apparent in the very fine art show, while the craft show was also a big attraction. Outdoors the ball diamond, tennis courts, and the horseshoe courts were very popular.

The dog show, master minded by Ray Woodward, was a very popular attraction thanks to Ray's good judgement.

The beef barbeque was a real treat for those who participated, and his hours of work preparing the fires and applying his magic seasoning should earn Elvin Johnson the title of master of the barbeque. Ably assisted by Stan Moore and by Ken Whitney, Elvin produced a product that was eagerly consumed by the people attending the event.

We understand that plans will soon be underway to hold a bigger and better Stanhope Day next year.

Trent Severn Waterway News

On August 13, the reservoir lakes in Haliburton still retained 73.6 per cent of their maximum storage water. A year ago the lakes were at 71.3 per cent and in 1977, the level was only 50.6 per cent of maximum. Relatively consistent precipitation in Haliburton and the Kawartha's with only a few periods of high evaporation have made the high spring storage last very well this year.

Flows were increased again this week throughout the reservoir system and reduced to minimum down the Otonabee River as the last of the rain surplus disappeared. Unless very dry weather in the remainder of August and early September causes rapid losses from the reservoirs we will not likely reduce the flow from the reservoir streams to minimum again this year. The threat of a wet autumn on lakes containing over 70 per cent of their storage will require us to continue the drawdown in order to be able to set for winter by October 31.

Lake Simcoe - Couchiching which had been right on the regulating curve last week lost about 3 cm over the windy days early in the week and is now about 2 cm below the curve. No flow changes have been made or anticipated.

Minden loses championship ... Haliburton consolation winner

The ladies' Minden Homestead team almost won the second annual Haliburton County Ladies Softball tournament but were downed in the championship match 12-9 by Little Britain on Sunday.

It looked grim for Minden in the first inning as Little Britain came up with seven runs but in a valiant battle the team came in with nine runs only to be outdone by their competitors.

Joan Paul was named the most valuable player for Minden while Cindy Mork was on the mound for Little Britain.

The tournament started off in murky weather on Saturday morning with the home team, Haliburton, meeting up with last year's winners, the Oakwood A's.

The champs were just too strong for the Haliburton girls as they defeated them 15-3.

The next game saw Little Britain defeat Coboconk 12-5.

In a runaway game L'Amble demolished Paudash 33-1.

In the most exciting game of the tournament Minden Homestead and the Oakwood A's locked horns.

In the second inning, Oakwood was leading 5-2 but Minden tied it up at the bottom of the seventh, to send the game into overtime.

Minden held Oakwood in the top of the eighth but in the bottom of the inning Anne Hewson led off with a triple and scored on a fly ball to right field by Helen Burk.

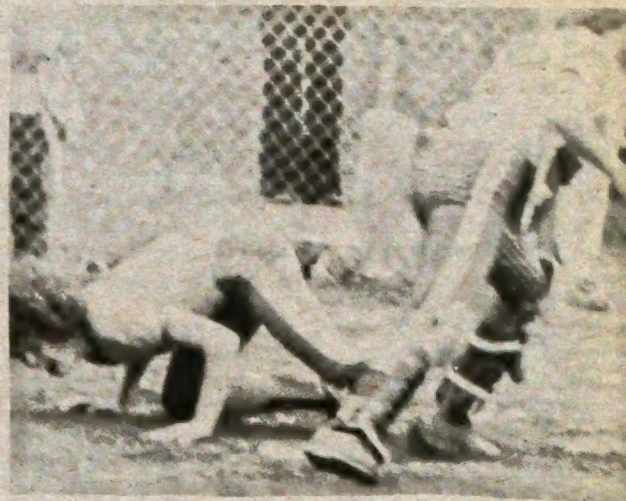

Marlaine Wilson was named the most valuable player with Anne Hewson the winning pitcher while Joan Clayton took the loss.

In the consolation round, Haliburton met Coboconk and defeated the visiting team 15-5. The win put Haliburton in the consolation championship against Paudash.

Haliburton won the game 25-8 to take the trophy with Nancy Maughan pitching the game. Betty Whiteway was named the most valuable player for Haliburton.

On Sunday morning Little Britain met with L'Amble to decide which team would meet Minden in the playoffs.

It was a close game in the fifth inning when Little Britain was leading 4-3, but in the following inning they strengthened their lead with seven runs to win the game 11-5.

Home

It sure was a close call when this Haliburton player made a slide for home plate.

Minden, West Guilford lead in softball play-offs

Minden and West Guilford have grabbed commanding leads in the two series leading to the finals in the Haliburton Ladies Softball League. With the close of regular season play last week, the league was divided into two sections for the semi-final play-downs.

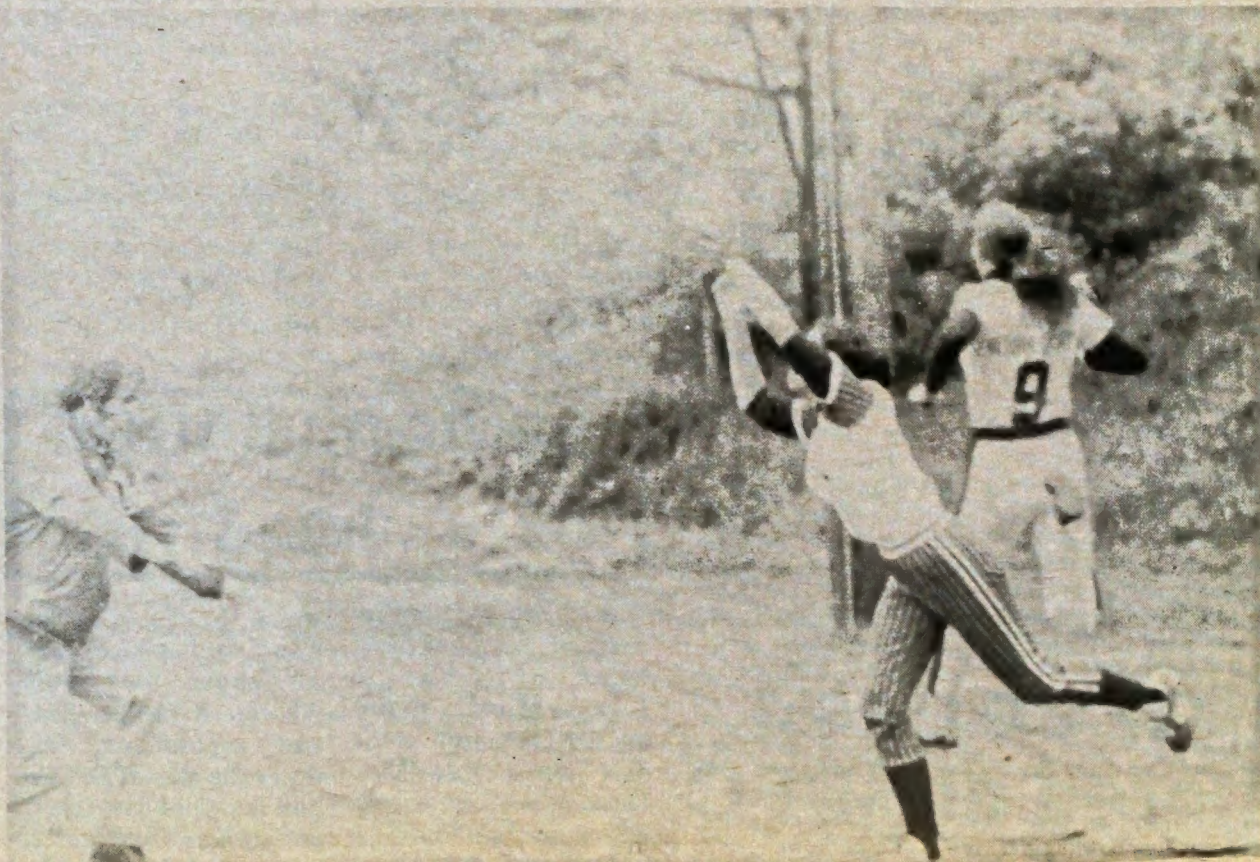

In the first series West Guilford defeated Haliburton in both outings. West Guilford edged out the regular season champions by one run in each of the contests. Earning the wins for West Guilford was Nancy Brink, while Nancy Maughan took the losses.

In the second series, Minden also holds a two game edge over Stanhope.

Joan Paul led the ladies to victory in the first contest, defeating Stanhope 18-9. Kelly Harrison turned in an excellent game for the Stanhope ladies. The winning pitcher was Anne Hewson while the loser was Marg Darby.

Minden again outpowered Stanhope in the second contest, coming up with a 17-11 win. Patty Lou Vasey was the winning hurler while Marg Darby was on the mound for Stanhope. Leading hitters for Minden included Joan Paul, Anne Hewson, and Marlaine Wilson.

Gun club sets up fall roster

The Haliburton County Marksmen Club has a full roster of events for the upcoming fall season.

With better weather and more time, the club hopes to be able to round out an excellent shooting program and also have the opportunity to continue to work on the Bobcaygeon Road range.

Included in the program, are shoots and practices planned for September, October and November.

To start off the fall schedule, a classification shoot (practice) will be held on Sunday, September 9. The next two Sundays, September 16 and 23, classification shoots will also be held. Many of these shoots will be held throughout the season to determine which class each member will belong to for each particular shooting event.

Included in the events are small bore rifle, high power rifle and trap shooting. All classification shoots will begin at 4 p.m.

To wrap up September's events, a Grand County Turkey Shoot will start at 2 p.m. on September 30.

This shoot will feature .22 rifle, high power rifle and trap shooting events.

It is scheduled to promote fun and friendship, so members are urged to bring along friends and family.

If interested in joining the club contact Jeffrey Lodenquai in Minden.

Bowling tips

Mrs. Roy Little gets some tips on lawn bowling from club organizer Cy Heal during the first day of bowling on indoor green at the Curling Club. The green was officially opened by Anson, Hindon and Minden Reeve Sinclair Nesbitt, who threw out the first ball.

New sports facility for Minden

Minden acquired another recreational facility Saturday as the Lawn Bowling Club officially opened its first indoor green. Reeve Sinclair Nesbitt bowled the first ball on the carpet and declared the surface open.

The indoor bowling green is located at the Curling Club.

A crowd of close to 30 were on hand for the opening. Cy Heal, spokesman for the club expressed his delight at seeing so many in attendance. He said the future looked bright for lawn bowling in the community and hinted that a second indoor green may be purchased in the near future. The club will have the use of the curling building for the next six weeks, when preparations for the curling season will begin. Next year the bowlers are expected to begin their season as soon as the curlers are finished with the building.

Lawn bowling is a sport that usually takes place out of doors on a green. However, as Heal pointed out, the carpet green in the curling club offers a surface just as good as outdoor greens and eliminates many of the problems, such as weather, insects and lightning.

He said that by establishing the greens indoors, bowlers will be able to take part in the sport anytime of the day or evening. He said the club plans to have regular league games during the week, but at other times the green will open to anyone wishing to play.

Reeve Sinclair Nesbitt said he was pleased to see another sporting facility in the Minden area and he praised the efforts of those involved for getting it off the ground.

Former reeve Reg Booth also addressed the gathering. He echoed the sentiments of Nesbitt noting his pleasure at seeing the facility become a reality.

Those interested in joining the Minden Lawn Bowling Club can contact Cy Heal or attend one of the daily bowling sessions at 2 or 7 p.m. Novice bowlers are being encouraged to join and instruction will be available for those who are unfamiliar with the game. The membership fee for the remainder of this season is $7.50.

Helpful hint

Victoria-Haliburton M.P.P. John Eakins, far left, told the Stonehenge project workers Roger Hicks and Mike Wright and project manager Tom Cookson, that the best promotional idea they could follow up on would be to get all the local organizations interested. He pointed out that if the people in Queen's Park saw the entire county was behind the proposed tourist attraction it would be easier to get the necessary grants to continue.

Who or what is zucchini?

No, it's not a brother of Houdini, nor is it the name of the latest Godfather movie.

It is a green, tender vegetable that is grown in Ontario and is now starting to appear on the market.

Raw, steamed, boiled, fried, or frozed the Ontario Ministry of Agriculture and food says zucchini is a versatile little vegetable. Here's more information.

There are plenty of fresh Ontario zucchini on the market now. Whether you plan to cook them, eat them raw or freeze them for later, now is the time to stock up, say the food specialists at the Ontario Ministry of Agriculture and Food.

Zucchini is a summer squash, and, unlike the late or winter varieties, it has a tender and edible skin. Look for zucchini that is firm, has a good green color, and is free from soft spots. It should be heavy for its size.

Since it is a very tender vegetable, zucchini requires only a short cooking time. To capture its delicate flavor, the best cooking methods include pan frying, steaming, boiling, and baking.

Zucchini goes well with other vegetables such as tomatoes, green peppers, and eggplant, all of which are readily available during August in Ontario. Combine these vegetables to make tasty summer casseroles.

For something different, eat zucchini raw. It's great in salads. Just wash and cut in slices or chunks. There's no need to peel. Zucchini is also a good choice to include on a raw vegetable tray with a tasty dip.

Freezing zucchini is very simple. Just wash it, cut in slices, then blanch for 2 minutes. Chill quickly and drain well before packaging. Freeze immediately. As an alternative, after blanching, zucchini can be frozen in a single layer on a tray. Once frozen, it should be packaged and returned to the freezer.

Farm News and Views

Now is the ideal time to take soil samples for your 1980 crops.

Many farmers plan to take their soil samples later in the fall after all their harvesting is finished. However, cold, wet weather often delays harvesting, they get busy at other important jobs, and before they realize it, the ground is frozen and it's too late to get those samples.

During the next couple of weeks farmers should plan to spend an hour or two on this important job. With hay and grain crops harvested, it's easy to sample these fields. And even though the corn is still growing, it's not too difficult to go through the corn fields for samples as well.

Soil sample boxes are readily available at most farm supply outlets in the area, or at the Lindsay Agricultural Office.

A shovel or soil tube and a pail are all the equipment you need. It's a good idea to sample 10 spots in a small field, or one place per acre in larger fields.

The soil samples are sent to the Soil Test Lab at the O.A.C. in Guelph for analysis. The testing of soil samples for field crops is free of charge. This analysis indicates the amounts of phosphorus, potash and magnesium available for growing plants in that field, as well as whether any limestone is needed to improve the soil.

This information is then related to the amounts of plant food required to profitably grow the specific crop you plan for that field, and a definite fertilization program is recommended. This program can include manure or commercial fertilizer or a combination of both.

Farmers in Victoria & Haliburton Counties realize the value of getting their soils tested. Don't wait until too late this fall to take your soil samples. Do it now.

Rockhounds in Wilberforce

Many rockhounds converged on Wilberforce last weekend to take in the many exhibits on display.

Rocks were being shown from all parts of the globe and all sorts of decorative items made of stone were on display.

In the top photo, Opal dealer and cutter, Peter Jolly, puts the finishing touches on the beautiful mauve-colored stones.

Below, a local enthusiast took time out to pan for gold, the old-fashioned way. It seems like an arduous task and even with the high price of gold today, it didn't seem worth it.

Fly-by-night contractors may pave their own pockets

Every summer a few unwary consumers find out the hard way — there's a lot more to driveway paving than spreading a few feed of asphalt. Whether you're having a new driveway paved or an old one repaved, you should know exactly what you want done, how to choose a contractor and what to look for in a contract before you sign. Most driveway pavers operate honestly, but it's up to the consumer to recognize the few unscrupulous contractors that show up every season, leaving a trail of cracked driveways, incomplete work and angry consumers behind them.

Assess your needs

Develop some understanding of what needs to be done before you consult a paving company. Check your property boundary and be sure you're not paving the neighbour's lot. Decide whether or not excavation is necessary. You'll need to excavate if the stone under your driveway isn't deep enough to provide a firm foundation or if the new or repaved driveway would be higher than the surrounding ground.

Crushed limestone is generally preferred as a driveway base material because it compacts well. At least six inches or 150 millimetres of crushed limestone will be required for a new driveway. If you are regrading a driveway you'll need enough limestone to ensure proper drainage. A 460 millimetre or 18-inch fall is needed for every 30 metres or 100 feet of driveway. In addition, the driveway should slope away from the house and garage.

About 50 millimetres or two inches of compacted asphalt should be used on your home driveway. If the asphalt is thicker, it will remain soft when compacted. Don't let a contractor use 75 millimetres or three inches of compacted asphalt unless it is being applied in two layers.

Coarser grades of asphalt are more durable. A mix known as HL3A is generally used for home driveways, while a coarser HL3 mix is used for highways and steep driveways, because it provides better traction.

Sealer, which makes the driveway more oil and grease resistant, should be applied 60 to 90 days after paving. Don't have it applied too early — it won't mix with the oil in the fresh asphalt. You may want the paving contractors to apply this sealer themselves. If not, be sure that applying it yourself or having it applied by another company will not void the original contractor's guarantee.

Choose a reliable contractor

Choosing a company that will charge a fair price and provide good workmanship can be difficult. That's why it's important to shop around. Make sure you get at least three written estimates that include a price breakdown for all the work to be done.

Remember that the contractor giving the cheapest estimate doesn't necessarily do the best job. Check the company's reputation through your local Better Business Bureau. Ask friends to recommend pavers.

Better still, ask the pavers for names and addresses of people they have worked for recently. Find out if the customers are satisfied and if possible, inspect the work yourself.

Be wary of pavers who canvass neighbourhoods offering bargain prices. It is important that the company you are dealing with will still be around to handle any problems you may encounter after the job is done.

Rights and responsibilities

In Ontario you are protected against unfair business practices by The Business Practices Act and The Consumer Protection Act. The ministry of consumer and commercial relations can provide further information on this legislation as well as on home repairs, through its Consumer Information Centre at 555 Yonge Street, Toronto M7A 2H6.

But you are still responsible for the proper care and maintenance of your new driveway — the contractor can't be expected to make amends for damage caused after the work was completed. When a driveway is new, it must be treated carefully.

On a hot day, asphalt can be easily marked by ladders, bicycle kickstands and other pointed, heavy objects. Combine proper care with the choice of a reputable contractor, and your investment should be a lasting one.
